Haymakers

MIKE and Yvonne Brosnan are South Dakota alfalfa aces. They operate a farm that has a reputation for being able to put up large quantities of dairy-quality alfalfa consistently. Part of their success is due to the resources they have. They farm in central South Dakota in the James River Valley south of Huron, where there's a high water table that feeds thirsty alfalfa plants. The summer weather is often hotter and drier than many other parts of the Midwest, which gives them a bigger window to put up high-quality alfalfa. Learn more about how they do it consistently and why they love the hay business. See Pages 4-5.
