

Short Takes

Mid-Atlantic Farm Show moves to Concord

THE Mid-Atlantic Farm Show will move from Wilson, N.C., to Concord, N.C., this year. This annual farm show has been running for 31 years. It is slated this year for Nov. 2-4 at the Cabarrus Arena and Events Center.

The show has been making the rounds in recent years. It was held in Wilson for a number of years; then it moved to Goldsboro and Williamston, then back to Wilson for two years and now to Concord near Charlotte.

Owner Charles Rogers recently sold the show to W.C. Lanier of Wilmington and retired.

Show organizers say there will be more than 200 exhibitors and that it will attract 30,000 attendees who will come to see the farm equipment implements and demonstrations.

Adult admission is $6. Children age 12 and under are admitted free of charge.

For more information, visit www.midatlanticfarmshow.com on the Internet.

SHOW EXHIBIT: Massey Ferguson tractors were lined up at the 2004 Mid-Atlantic Farm Show to demonstrate the company's wide-ranging offerings in terms of price, features and size.

John Deere Dealers

See one of these dealers for a demonstration

North Carolina

Burlington

Byrd Tractor & Equipment Co.

Whiteville

V and M Supply Co., Inc.

Virginia

Ashland

James River Companies, LLC

Buchanan

Blueridge Farm Center, Inc.

Burkeville

James River Equip. – Burkeville

Charlottesville

Piedmont Equip. Co., Inc.

Danville

James River Equip. – Danville

Fredericksburg

Greenline Service Corp.

Rocky Mount

Anderson Tractor & Equipment

Rustburg

Phillips Equip. Corp.

South Hill

James River
Equipment – South Hill

Warrenton

Tribble Equipment

Wytheville

R.P. Johnson Sons, Inc.

genuine

Support

You can't see it. You can't order it. But underneath all the green paint, there's a promise. A promise that when you need us, we'll be there ... with a critical part, some timely advice, or maybe even with your next combine. Find out what Genuine Support means at any of the nearly 2,000 North American John Deere dealers, or visit us online at www.JohnDeere.com/60Series

JOHN DEERE

Short Takes

Mid-Atlantic Farm Show moves to Concord

THE Mid-Atlantic Farm Show will move from Wilson, N.C., to Concord, N.C., this year. This annual farm show has been running for 31 years. It is slated this year for Nov. 2-4 at the Cabarrus Arena and Events Center.

The show has been making the rounds in recent years. It was held in Wilson for a number of years; then it moved to Goldsboro and Williamston, then back to Wilson for two years and now to Concord near Charlotte.

Owner Charles Rogers recently sold the show to W.C. Lanier of Wilmington and retired.

Show organizers say there

will be more than 200 exhibitors and that it will attract 30,000 attendees who will come to see the farm equipment implements and demonstrations.

Adult admission is $6. Children age 12 and under are admitted free of charge.

For more information, visit www.midatlanticfarmshow.com on the Internet.

SHOW EXHIBIT: Massey Ferguson tractors were lined up at the 2004 Mid-Atlantic Farm Show to demonstrate the company's wide-ranging offerings in terms of price, features and size.

John Deere Dealers

See one of these dealers for a demonstration

North Carolina

Burlington

Byrd Tractor & Equipment Co.

Whiteville

V and M Supply Co., Inc.

Virginia

Ashland

James River Companies, LLC

Buchanan

Blueridge Farm Center, Inc.

Burkeville

James River Equip. – Burkeville

Charlottesville

Piedmont Equip. Co., Inc.

Danville

James River Equip. – Danville

Fredericksburg

Greenline Service Corp.

Rocky Mount

Anderson Tractor & Equipment

Rustburg

Phillips Equip. Corp.

South Hill

James River Equipment – South Hill

Warrenton

Tribble Equipment

Wytheville

R.P. Johnson Sons, Inc.

New John Deere round balers starting as low as $13,999*

JOHN DEERE QUALITY AT AN EVEN MORE AFFORDABLE PRICE.

If you're looking for a baler that can make a great-looking twine wrapped bale, but don't want to pay a lot, check out the new John Deere 457 Standard Baler. Turn windrows into tight, dense, four-foot by up to five-foot tall bales, all for less than $14,000! And that's for a new, top quality John Deere baler. Stop by your local John Deere dealership today to find out more!

*Price is for base unit and does not include freight, set-up, applicable taxes/fees, or optional equipment. Price subject to change without notice or obligation.